I'm writing a blog-system in PHP that also integrates a tag system. One thing i read about tag wikis is that they get cleaned up often, because their rules grow old and are hard to maintain. I thought about 2 ways to solve this problem: Use some script that removes old tags (without deleting them, ofc) Split the wikis into several wikis where for example the titles of the "answered" wikis and "unanswered" wiki contain the tag-wiki. These two ways aren't optimal, because: Each wiki will have to be run by a cron-job (2nd idea) Question-wikis (wanted: to keep questions available) won't be cleaned as soon as other wikis Thus my question: How to define best a tag wiki that would be easy to maintain? How do you do that with your blog-system? A: To my knowledge, I do not see an obvious solution that would solve your problem without breaking the Wiki-model. I would go with using an appropriate and easy-to-maintain database such as MySQL. This way you would be able to remove answers and questions that are not used anymore based on some arbitrary criterias. For example, you could have some MySQL field "last_updated" to indicate the timestamp of when the question was last updated, without replacement from [q; 4, m; 2, f; 1, v; 1, a; 2, w; 1]? 2/165 Two letters picked without replacement from [v; 1, u; 1,
